

Directions for Tuesday

The Ethics icon reminds us to think about the pros and cons of a situation, or the good and the bad. Do you want ants to invade your picnic and steal your food? On the other hand, should people be killing animals because they are pests?

Here is where you get to decide how the story ends: Should the kid squish the ant or let the ant live?

1. Write a one-page ending to the story with a picture. These endings will become part of a First Grade Book using Book Creator. This means we are looking for polished products. Color the picture nicely. Make your writing super clear. Write your first name neatly.

Use the paper provided below. You can download it underneath the Scribd document - "Book Ending to Print." The 2nd sheet is for those who need more room to write. You only have to do the first page.

If you do not have a printer, please draw and write on a plain piece of paper, oriented the same way - landscape.

2. Take a picture of your ending and email it to cme5472@lausd.net or upload it on the website.

We hope to have as many people participate in making this shared book as possible!

3. Make a Flipgrid of you reading your ending. I plan on using the audio for the book, so don't say your name or anything else. Just read what you wrote. Thank you!
